Dear Kristina

Further to our earlier correspondence, it is my pleasure to invite you to write a Tansley review on the topic of 'Thermal sensitivity across forest vertical profiles: patterns, mechanisms, and ecological implications'. New Phytologist Editor Nate McDowell has nominated you as the ideal author to write for this prestigious review series and we do hope that you would like to accept our invitation to contribute.

A typical Tansley review is approx. 6000 words (8000 max.) in length, with up to 150 references and 8 display elements. Although dealing with major research topics in some depth – to provide a 'touchstone' for those intending to enter the field – the reviews should also be reasonably accessible to the non-specialist. We would expect relevant older work to be discussed, but the review should, nevertheless, be less of an exercise in literature documentation and more of a forum for the presentation of ideas. Further detail on scope and format can be found in the attached guidelines, but should you have any questions please do not hesitate to contact me or either of my colleagues. I am also pleased to tell you that the figures of all accepted Tansley articles have the opportunity to be improved, where needed, by a professional illustrator.

We usually ask for a schedule to submission in the region of five months, taking us to 15 February 2020. Nevertheless, given the uncertainty imposed by the covid-19 pandemic we are happy to be flexible on the timeframe.

As a token 'thank you', if you are able to accept our invitation, we would be glad to fix you up with a year's subscription to New Phytologist, and we will also be pleased to offer you an honorarium of £250 on receipt of the review. This can of course be divided among co-authors at your discretion.

I look forwards to hearing from you once you have had time to consider this.

With kind regards
Holly
